

BibleGreg.com, Support Address:
PO Box 533, Lobeco SC 29931

December 2013

Greetings dear saints in the matchless name of our wonderful Lord and Savior Jesus Christ!

First I would like to update you on my health. I received a grim report from the doctor. He said I have been on the prednisone way too long and if I do not get off it shortly I would, "Be in a box real soon". He was very plain about it. The alternative is some chemotherapy type of drug. He said though this may sound bad it would at least help me live longer. He was willing to pay for a bone scan himself for me. My picture has not turned out as bleak right now for I have been able to get off of the prednisone and have not taken any alternative drugs. I have been feeling fairly well. I'm having my ups and down days but I find if I eat but once a day I feel the best. While visiting our sending church the men laid hands on me and prayed. I know others that received my last letter have also been praying and perhaps fasting for me as well. What a blessing! I believe this has kept me going and I thank the Lord for allowing me to get off the prednisone! Some new information has come to light that I believe can help me. If any of you know of an organic farm run by Christians that I could spend some time at I think I would greatly benefit from this. I would be glad to work to eat or work out some arrangement. So please let me know if any of you have a contact like this. I am practically looking for someone who has grass fed Jersey cows to drink the first milk when they calf. I have been looking online but have not made any headway as of yet.

Alas, I just finished a preaching tour in Pennsylvania. It was such a wonderful and fruitful time and I cannot express all the wonderful works that the Lord Jesus Christ did. My iPhone died and I lost my notes, names and some numbers but here are some of the highlights as I can best recall them.

Penn State University; each visit here was very fruitful. However, I can tell that students seem to be inoculated to the preaching compared to years past but nonetheless there were at least two professions of faith. One student I would like to tell you about is, Almonze. The Lord allowed him to come by and so I struck up conversation with him which just happened to lead into the Bible of course and explained to him the Gospel. After a good while of showing him scriptures and dealing with him about his soul, Almonze decided to trust Christ. We both got down right there on the main concourse and he cried to God to save his soul. It's always a blessing to hear sinners cry out to the Lord mind at first he said was saved but as I challenged him on his testimony he admitted he was not saved at all. His dad is a pastor and Tim said his dad tells him the same things I told him. Please pray for replied, "No, there are no absolutes!" I then asked her, "Are you absolutely sure?" Now this quickly enforced the law of non-contradiction on her and showed the absurdity of her statement. From then on as I would ask her questions she would avoid them by replying, "Oh I know where you going with that." She really had nothing of substance to say but she would just attack me and God's word. I asked her if there was good and evil to which she said, "No." I then asked her, "Is there a right and wrong?" She finally said, "No, there is no right or wrong." I then proceeded to ask her if it was wrong for Hitler to be involved in killing 6 million Jews. She avoided the question so I asked her again; this time she said, "Well Hitler was a Christian you know." I replied, "No, he was a Catholic." I had to ask her a third time. I said, "Quit avoiding the question. Please tell us whether it was wrong for Hitler to be involved in killing 6 million Jews or not." With all these students now staring at her waiting for her response, she finally answered under pressure, "Yes, it to save them! To listen to them pouring out their heart to God and you never know what they are going to say. It's really touching! Almonze got up after and gave a short testimony to his class mates walking by. Amen!

Tim's salvation!

Rarely do professors come out to speak to me with students gathered around. However, I had three different professors on three different campuses confront me and make a bold stand in front of students.

Bloomsburg University PA was probably one of my greatest highlights. Here's a link to watch: <http://youtu.be/2C8tZ9cMFgA>

The first time there was a philosophy professor from

The second day the crowd of students that gathered around reached at least 400. There was a group of Christians at this campus standing on the sidelines witnessing as I preached. They were greatly encouraged and e-mailed me a nice note later on. I encouraged them to continue to be a bold witness for the Lord Jesus Christ there. There were many great witnesses for me. One student named, Tim who sticks out in my Bloomsburg University. ("Blond lady" in the picture below, no pun intended.☺) She came out to debate me and raised her hand to speak out in the crowd of students. As I beckoned to her with my hand she said, "I am an atheist! And I am a philosophy professor here." I asked her if she believed in absolutes. She was wrong." I then began to explain, "If it was wrong for him to kill then there is "wrong" and therefore there must be "right" too. And if there is right and wrong then there is a moral law to distinguish between right and wrong and this is it." I then held up the Bible and explained that without the God of the Bible you cannot have right and wrong and furthermore if we are the products of evolutionary chance you would not have that. I then proceeded to preach the everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ. Sure I was nervous debating a philosophy

University in Pennsylvania. He was a math professor. At least he admitted that there were absolutes. It would be pretty hard to say there were no absolutes if you're dealing with math. For example $2+2 = 4$ positively. He was too smart for his

Watch this link <http://youtu.be/tuys040JaK8> and I think you will appreciate and be encouraged by the video.

Josiah (Crowd in picture below gathered as he quotes scripture) and Joseph are always a blessing to have come out, preach, pass out tracts and quote Bible verses. At one of the campuses the students were really opposed to me having them out there. I told them if they were really concerned about them they would not curse and swear and say such things as they do. One of the students replied, "You're right, I don't care about them!" Oh the wickedness of sinful hearts. Their professor but they have no foundation and so it's rather easy to show that they have nothing to stand on. Thank you Jesus! Col 2:8 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy...and not after Christ.

own good and very proud of it. Another problem with this professor was that he would hardly let me get a word in edgewise. One

While ministering at Shippensburg University I had a biology professor come out. He just used a few expletives attacking the Bible. Then he walked away. I answered him, "Is that your best argument? That's no argument at all." He just continued storming off. It is sad they can be allowed to teach.

The third professor that came out to debate me was at Lock Haven good way to win an argument is to never let your opponent speak. When I finally explained this to him he said, "Okay go ahead and talk." It was only about half of a second later he cut me off again. I just happened to have this one recorded with my video camera.

only hope is the new birth to Jesus Christ.

We appreciate your prayers and care for us. May Christ Jesus richly bless you.

The Greg Davis family.